"Black and white may at first suggest a contrast of light and dark. But light and dark are so variable and infinite in possibility, so tender and nuanced, that they surely belong to an entirely different realm from the severe extremes of black and white. Black seems nonnegotiable. Either it is or it isn't. However, a great many whites can pass as white, especially where black is present."

(Jacqueline Gourevitch)

This event will coincide with the Fuller Building Gallery Night.
